Highlights

Overview

Annapurna Birding Treks

Expected over 175 species of birds in good season. (October to May)

The Annapurna Conservation Area (ACA) contains some of the world's highest peaks and the world's deepest valley-the Kali Gandaki River Valley. It is the Nepal's largest protected area of 7629 sq. km. It was established in 1992. The proposed conservation area encompasses the Annapurna range in Western Nepal, about 240 km west from Kathmandu. It is bounded to the north by the dry alpine deserts of Mustang and Tibet (China), to the west by the Kali Gandaki River, to the east by Marsyandi Valley and to the south by valleys and foothills north of Pokhara. The nearest town is Pokhara, some 30 km to the south. Access is by road from Pokhara Naudanda, Nayapul, and from then onwards by foot. The ACA has an entire habitats gradient from sub tropical Sal forest to perennial snow harboring different forest types with 1226 plant species including 55 endemics, 30 mammals and over 470 birds.

Some of the good birds possible to be seen: Kalij heasant, Bearded Vulture, Tesias, Babblers, Scimitar-babblers, Laughingthrushes, Rosefinches, Finches, Accentors, Raptors, Sunbirds, Bush Robins, many Warblers, Tits, Yuhinas, Minlas, Thrushes, Parrotbills and many more.
